Rednecks help make fishing better

REBECCA WILD BAXTER

Members of the Ridin' Redneck 4-H Club from Myakka Valley, including Travis Kennell (L) and Kyle Tabar, spent last Saturday helping to make eight large reef balls. Harry Rolfe of Reef Innovations worked with the kids to fill the molds with specially treated concrete that has a lowered pH balance that helps fish and underwater plants accept the reef as part of their natural habitat. The reef balls will be sunk in Sarasota Bay around the end of the month.
