SEPTEMBER 1995

VOLUME 22 NUMBER 9

September Speaker Todd Barber of Reef Balls

In response to the deterioration of the reef systems in many parts of the world (including our own Georgia coast), Jerry and Todd Barber have devised a low-cost, environmentally safe answer to building and deploying artificial reefs: Reef Balls. Not only are they environmentally safe, but Reef Balls are manufactured for very precise resource management goals. By altering the concrete mixture, surface texture, and hole size, the modules can attract different types of organisms. Reef Balls have been placed worldwide with great success. Because without the reefs, where would we dwell? The Atlanta Reef Dwellers are pleased to have Todd Barber discuss Reef Balls at our September meeting. Todd will update us on the progress he and his army of volunteers have made in reconstructing our important and delicate reef systems.

International Underwater Cleanup Day September 16, 1995

We need someone to volunteer as our Captain. We also need volunteers to help collect, sort and bag the trash. Non divers can volunteer as well. Skin Diver published our club in the last issue. Tom Peary has already agreed to help coordinate the effort but will not be able to make the September 16 cleanup so others are needed to help in various duties. This would be a great way to help cleanup our diving environment and give the Atlanta Reef Dwellers an opportunity to be involved in a community service activity.
